FOREWORD

"Not everything that is faced can be changed; but nothing can be changed until it is faced." says James Baldwin.

It is so much easier to ignore or avoid change than to consider its value to one's way of life or way of thinking.

But if one really hears the sound of "a different drummer" (another quotation from Thoreau), he must find the moral courage to march to its beat.

There is nothing more important, in my opinion, that you could have learned while a student at this school than to realize this and practice it. If we are, indeed, involved in a social revolution, then there is all the more reason to face issues honestly and support change courageously.
